Impact of COVID-19 and the Lockdowns

With the enduring events of the coronavirus, many people have found themselves personally and professionally challenged to consider their 'framework for self-care'.

Covid-19 has changed our ways of working. It is also affecting the psychological health of many individuals.

While people may react differently to the pandemic, characteristic patterns of emotional response to the unfolding situations across the nation are emerging.

Pandemic Fatigue

After many months of dealing with the fallout from COVID-19, many people are experiencing pandemic fatigue.

Pandemic fatigue is a very real feeling of exhaustion stemming from the effects of COVID-19, including the different waves and several lockdowns.

What's important to remember is that it's normal to be feeling somewhat flat in mood and burned out right now.

What Is Pandemic Fatigue?

Wrestling with intense emotions day after day drains your energy, causing fatigue.

The fatigue can stem from a number of emotions you've experienced during the pandemic.

These emotions may include:

1. Fear and Anxiety

2. Ambiguity

3. Loneliness

4. Hopelessness

Signs of Pandemic Fatigue

The hallmark sign of pandemic fatigue is a sense of inner weariness.

You may also feel:

1. Helpless
2. Sad
3. Worried
4. Frustrated
5. Irritable

You may notice that you:

- Eat or sleep more or less than usual
- Feel on edge or nervous
- Have trouble focusing (brain fog)
- Are quick-tempered
- Lack motivation
- Experience racing thoughts and rumination
- Withdraw from others

What can you do?

It is important to gain some understanding of how to cope with these different intense, yet normal, emotional responses.

Strategies for managing Pandemic Fatigue

1

Pay attention

2

Validate

3

Normalise

1. Pay attention to your emotional and physical needs.
2. Validate any feelings of anxiety, guilt, grief and trauma.
3. Normalise any emotional needs you may be experiencing.

If you are feeling...

Anxious,
overwhelmed
and uncertain

Plant both feet on the ground, take a few deep breaths and think about what you do know and what you can do today

Guilty

Remember it is because you are a compassionate and caring person and you simply want to help

Grief

Try to ride the waves of emotion, express them safely, and be patient and kind to yourself, this will likely take many months to pass

Traumatised

Find ways to connect with your loved ones more often and try to focus on the present moment. Replace unhealthy coping behaviours such as alcohol misuse and inactivity with daily meaningful activities

Next Steps

Take steps to renew your energy and to feel more in control.

Wellness Strategic Steps

Take care of your body & mind

Establish healthy sleep hygiene

Acknowledge
your feelings

Put things into perspective

Reframe your self-talk

Stay connected to others

Create a Self-care Plan

The 4 steps of self-care planning:

1

Evaluate your coping skills. Make a list of all the things that have worked for you in the past.

2

Identify your daily self-care needs and make time for these.

3

Defuse from negative thoughts. Reflect. Examine. Replace.

4

Create a Pleasurable Activities Plan and make sure to include meaningful and creative activities.

Create New Traditions

1. Do something that makes you feel good physically, mentally, or emotionally.

You might focus on a hobby such as playing guitar or painting. Nourish your body with healthy foods and pamper yourself with a facial. Do a work out from home or go on a walk or a long run

2. Create some fun while in lockdown.

Make Friday nights your family movie night or have a picnic in the backyard or balcony every Sunday. You can also organise a virtual mid-week check-in with friends.

3. Let your creative side flow and generate ideas that work well for you.

Start a vision board to capture all your ideas.

Strategies for Managers & Leaders

Provide a supportive work environment that is nurturing and compassionate:

- Talk about the situation:

Include a discussion on stress and fatigue in regular meetings to educate staff about warning signs and to share ideas on effective coping solutions.

- Acknowledge staff contributions:

It is essential for leaders to recognise and thank staff for their compassionate care. This can be done in meetings or with a note, email or other gesture.

- Adopt a flexible working model:

Be flexible, especially with staff who are on their own or who are caring for people during these intense periods. Working flexible hours makes us more efficient and productive and can help us avoid burnout.

- Check-in regularly:

This is a useful practice following any intense periods or prolonged difficult situations. Process stressful experiences together, receive feedback and encourage and support each other.

- Offer collective ways to share difficult experiences:

Offer collective ways to share difficult experiences to assist in processing grief and expressing compassion fatigue.

- Nourish:

Encourage and model healthy lifestyles. Ensure staff take regular breaks throughout the day. Encourage walking and other exercise.

- Education:

Provide education and training about setting boundaries, conflict resolution, ethical dilemmas and self-care.

- Develop a peer/buddy system:

Pair everyone up with a buddy and encourage them to check-in on each other regularly.

Tips to cope and build team resilience

Communicate with your co-workers, supervisors, and employees about job stress.

- Talk openly about how the pandemic is affecting your work.
- Identify factors that cause stress and work together to identify solutions.
- Talk about how to access mental health resources in your workplace.
- Remind each other that you are performing a crucial role in fighting this pandemic and that you are all doing the best you can with the resources available.

Starting from today, consider a 3-minute activity at the end of each working day

1

Take 3 deep breaths.

2

Call out 3 things that were tough.

3

Call out 3 things that went well.

Finally, seek help when needed...
